Failing Forward: Elevating Your Magic Through Trial and Error

In this refreshingly unconventional lecture, Steve looks into the importance of learning through failure. While we all recognize the necessity of investing hours in honing our craft through practice, he reminds us that the journey doesn't end there. Embracing our flawed, and often horrendous (in Steve's case) early performances whether in front of friends, family, or a paying audience is an essential part of the learning process, despite how horrifically embarrassing it may be. You'll even enjoy video evidence of the aforementioned horrors. Every failure is a 'funny story'.

With a wealth of experience spanning over 30 years, Steve openly shares his own stories of painful failures, (some rather recent!) which have been instrumental in his continuous growth and development. In this candid presentation, he'll analyse recent and historic works in progress, helping you to overcome the fear of mistakes.

The anxiety of screwing up often prevents us from sharing our wonderful craft. You have enough tricks, this lecture will help make sure you use them.
Oh and yes, there will be tricks too!
